

ABSTRACT

The invention facilitates monitoring and ensuring data security in security update information between software and hardware applications. The invention is achieved through an automated system that allows for substantial uniformity and substantially seamless security through a front-end system. The invention may use one or more third-party products to facilitate communication between computing platforms.